IV. Compliance with Design Review Guidelines

(Indicate compliance with each guideline. If application does not comply with a particular guideline, please explain why.)

Signs are the highest profile element that the public is aware of and leaves the public with an impression of the community. Signs must be of high quality and fit the needs of the situation, while blending with the rest of the community's desires. A garish sign may promote additional short term recognition, but will reduce the community's long term attractiveness and image. Sign clutter, even of quality signs, will also reduce the community's attractiveness and image and is more confusing than informative. No matter how much citizens and developers improve their existing and future community's commercial, industrial, and residential area's buildings, parks, roads, landscaping, etc., the image of the community will not improve unless the community's signage is raised to the same level of quality as the rest of the community.

The following Design Guidelines should be considered in the planning and design of all new and renovation sign projects in the community; see also Jerome Municipal Code for standards.

- Promote sign design and placement that reflects the community's desire for human scale regarding height, proportion, site features, shapes and materials.
- Signs must be produced using professional workmanship without hand lettering or with a sloppy or garish paint job.
- The primary sign(s) for a business must be constructed of permanent materials. Unacceptable temporary materials include but are not limited to paper, cardboard, vinyl banner, fabric, poster board, and unfinished wood
- English translation of signs must be visible and lettering must be of equal size to other languages displayed on the sign, unless there is no reasonable translation available. Exclusions may include the legal names of the business or the proprietor name.
